RUNAWAY.

HENDRICK or HENRY FREY, a Swiss or German Redemptioner, absconded from my service on the morning of the 4th inst. (Thursday) He is about 23, 24 or 25 years old; has a good countenance; is about 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high, and of common size otherwise—stooping or inclining forward a little when he walks.—He had on a fur hat nearly new, he took with him a mixed coloured great coat, not new, a dark mixed coloured coatee and pantaloons, two or three shirts, a pair of boots and shoes, and some other things, which, except those he had on, he probably carried in his knapsack—he had also a silver watch when he went off. He had emigrated from Basle in Switzerland, and arrived in Philadelphia last summer in the ship "Johannah and Elizabeth." He was regularly indented to me there for three years from August last, and was employed as a gardener. It is ascertained that he took his seat in the stage in Georgetown, by the assumed name of John Reibert, for Fredericktown, and started at 5 o'clock in the morning, arrived at Frederick about sundown that day, and immediately proceeded on foot about 6 miles to Miller's tavern, where he lodged—here he called for some coffee in the evening and in the morning having provision of his own in his knapsack—here he also offered his watch for sale—and here he enquired for Hagerstown and Pitt. He probably had but about 5 or 6 dollars in money when he left Miller's tavern on foot on Friday morning the 5th inst.—The probability is that he is gone to Pittsburgh; although necessity may prevent him from travelling so fast as he otherwise would.

The above reward will be given for him if returned to me, and all expences paid.

JOHN P. VAN NESS.

City of Washington, Dec. 13, 1817.

The fellow speaks or understands very little if any, English, using almost wholly the German language.

He has probably with him a formal written recommendation or voucher of his character from Basle containing his true name of Frey.

WILLIAM WALLACE.

September 19, 1817.

PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

By John I. Scull. No. 48.

Tuesday, January ,20 1818,

In our last we mentioned the surrender of Amelia Island. Amongst the articles provided for in the capitulation, it was stipulated, that 'private property unquestionably' belonging to its citizens was to be held sacred; and all public property was to be given up to the United States, who is to be the umpire on this occasion! Aury concludes his communication to the American officers demanding the surrender of Fernandina, in these words—

"Permit me, gentlemen, to request you to lay before the President of the U. States these remarks, in order that a matter of so serious a tendency may be duly considered. We have read his excellency's message at the opening of Congress with the utmost concern, & have concluded that the political situation of this republic has been greatly misrepresented in the United States, through the intrigues of our enemies. We have certainly a right to be heard; for which purpose I shall have the honor of forwarding to your government the necessary documents. If you are not disposed to let the thing remain in statu quo, until the President's farther determination be known, I am authorised to assure you that we respect and esteem too highly the people of the United States to carry matters to extremities."

On the evening of the celebration of St. John, the 27th ult. one of the most elegant and curious specimens of mechanism, was freely exhibited, in this Borough, by its owner, Mr. Smith, that probably is in the United States. It consists of a box four inches long, three wide and two deep—of fine gold.—On one end is a snuff box—on the other, a lid opens and discloses an eight day time piece, which besides striking the hours and quarters, plays a number of beautiful tunes. But the most wonderful part is, that on setting a spring, a picture on the top of the box rises slowly, and discovers a bird ascending from below. The bird is about an inch in length; of plumage the most rich, and yet the most natural. It sings with astonishing sweetness, and accompanies its voice with all those motions common to a living bird—its head turns from side to side—its little bill opens and its throat swells at every note, and its wings and tail spread and contract during its song. After finishing and repeating its strain, it drops upon its golden nest, descends to its retreat, and the lid gently closes to its place. It is said to be the work of an Italian artist, and to have been sold for 1500 dollars. Mr. Smith, in the most polite and accommodating manner, shewed it to all those ladies and gentlemen whose curiosity led them to wish to see this singular and pleasing exhibition.

[Village Recorder.

Oswego, (New-York,) Dec. 5.

A PANTHER we understand, has for several months infested the forest between this village and the Falls. Until a short time past he has generally kept aloof from the inhabitants as well as from travellers, but of late, has obviously resolved to wage war with those who are so unfortunate as to approach his vicinity.—Several persons have lately been assailed and pursued by him; and a few nights since he had the temerity to enter the door-yard of a gentleman in the vicinity of this village, to the great consternation of the family. We take the liberty to suggest to our citizens the policy, and even the necessity, of combining to destroy so dangerous and ferocious an animal. No lives have been lost, and immediate measures should be taken to prevent so distressing an occurrence.

RUNAWAY PATRONS.

The Bath paper gives notice to his patrons that he will publish the names of all such as runaway without paying the Printer; and will procure the publication of cautionary notices in all other newspapers, to guard Printers from imposition. This plan was once recommended by the Editor of the "Gleaner," and we believe acted on by him. We approve highly of it and should rejoice to see the practice generally adopted.—Albany Gaz.

Foreign.

Ceremonial for the Funeral of the Princess Charlotte.

It has already been announced that the ceremonial will be as nearly as possible the same as that observed at the funeral of the Princess Amelia, on the 13th of November, 1810.

Her Royal Highness the Princess Charlotte will be deposited in the vault of the Chapel Royal of St. George, Windsor.

The body will be removed from Claremont to the Royal Chapel, in a hearse drawn by the King's set of eight English black horses, fully caparisoned, escorted by a guard of the Royal Horse Guards, Blue, preceded by the trumpeters of the said regiment, and the King's the Queen's and the Royal Family's servants and grooms, in full state liveries, & followed by two of his majestys carriages, drawn by full sets of German black horses. The first and second carriages, will convey the Ladies who were attendants upon the late Princess; after which will follow the carriages of all the Princes and Princesses, each drawn by six horses.

The procession to be flanked by the Royal Staffordshire militia, part of which will bear the flambeaux. At the south door of the Royal Chapel the body will be met by the following persons, who are to proceed in the order hereafter mentioned; the grooms, servants, and trumpeters, to file off without the door:—

Pages of the Royal Family.
Pages of their Majesties.
Solicitor to her late Royal Highness,
Apothecary,
Surgeon,
and Physicians,
who attended her late Royal Highness,
Equerries of the Royal Family.
Equerries of their Majesties,
Grooms of the Bedchamber to the King.
The Queen's Vice Chamberlain.

Comptroller of his Majesty's Household. — Treasurer of his Majesty's Household.

The Queen's Master of the Horse.
Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard.
Lords of the Bedchamber to the King.
Groom of the Stole.
The King's Master of the Horse,

The Vice Chamberlain of his Majesty's Household, acting as Lord Chamberlain. — The Lord Steward of his Majesty's Household.

A Gentleman Usher of his Majesty, bearing the Coronet of her late Royal Highness upon a black cushion.

THE BODY.

Supporters of the Pall. { In a crimson velvet Coffin (carried by 8 Yeomen of the Guard, covered with a black velvet Pall, adorned with 8 escutcheons of her Royal Highness's arms. } Supporters of the Pall.

Supporters to the Chief Mourner. { The Chief Mourner. } Supporters to the chief Mourner.

Dukes of the Blood Royal,
In long black cloaks, the trains borne by their Royal Highnesses' Gentlemen.

At the entrance of St. George's Chapel (within the South door,) the Dean and Prebendaries, attended by the Choir will receive the body, and fall into the procession immediately before the Lord Chamberlain, and so proceed into the Choir, where the body will be placed on tressels, the head towards the altar, the coronet and cushion being laid upon the coffin, while the service is read by the Dean. There will be an anthem and dirge. The Chief Mourner will sit on a chair at the head of the corpse, the Supporters of the Pall will be nearest the body; that part of the service before the interment being read, the body will be deposited in the vault. The Knights will appear in the ribands of their respective orders over their coats. The Knights of the Garter attending the funeral will take their places in the Chapel in their several stalls.

A native of Otaheite, says a London paper, who sailed in that beautiful packet denominated Cleopatra's Barge, represents the death of Captain Cooke to have been occasioned by a different circumstance from what is commonly reported. He states that the crew, being in want of wood, pulled down a shed which was attached to a morai or burial place, always deemed sacred by those savages, to revenge which outrage they put the commander to death.

A foreign journal contains the following anecdote:—When Moreau was passing through Switzerland at the head of a French army, he had a fancy to see the celebrated Lavater. He called at his house, and the conversation falling upon Bonaparte, the Physiognomist expressed a great desire to see the picture of that famous general. "I can satisfy you" said Moreau, taking from his port-folio the portrait of Bonaparte. Lavater after examining it, said "that is not his portrait"—"Pardon me" replied the general," "it resembles him in every feature." "If that be the case" answered Lavater, "Bonaparte is a man that will be guilty of the greatest extravagancies."

In the LV. number of the Edinburgh Review, it is stated as a fact, "which every one knows," that lord Chatham's published speeches were written by Dr. Johnson. The fact is also mentioned by Dr. Johnson's biographer; and we have somewhere seen it asserted on what we then considered good authority, that Littleton's Letters on the History of England, were bought of Goldsmith. If these things did happen, they are facts of importance in the literary history of England; and are much more deserving of the attention of the learned than the idle speculations about the author of Junius's Letters.—*N. OYER AND TERMINER.

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, vs.
John Tiernan.

On Thursday morning last, came on before the Court of Oyer and Terminer in this city, the trial of John Tiernan. The indictment charged the prisoner with the murder of Patrick Campbell. It appeared from the testimony that both the prisoner and the deceased were natives of Ireland, and were fellow labourers on the turnpike road between Pittsburgh and Greensburgh. Campbell, who had taken a contract for making a part of the road, occupied a cabin near it, and Tiernan lived with him. They slept in the same bed; and during their acquaintance, which had commenced about six months before the murder, the deceased had rendered favours to the prisoner; had treated him with kindness, and the most friendly intercourse subsisted between them.

On Saturday evening the 5th of December last the deceased received from the overseer of the road twenty dollars, in the presence of the prisoner. During that evening, they were together at the tavern of one Zimmerman, when the deceased reprimanded the prisoner for having left in the road a board upon which they had been accustomed to wheel their barrows. The prisoner made an excuse which the deceased said was a lie, and directed him to go back and remove the board, adding that if he did not, he should not sleep with him in the cabin that night. The prisoner went out, as was supposed for the purpose of removing the board, and on his return was invited by the deceased to drink, which he did in such a manner as induced the deceased to tell him not to behave like a blackguard. Soon after this the prisoner went home, and about twelve o'clock the deceased followed him. On Sunday morning the prisoner went to the house of a Mr. Powell, and requested him to get breakfast for him and "Pat," the familiar name by which the deceased was known in the neighbourhood. While breakfast was preparing, Powell remembered that the deceased had promised to lend him a vest and said he would send his little girl for it. The prisoner said he would accompany her; and did so. Upon her return she told her father that she had been much frightened with the appearance of the house, that the chaff from the bed was scattered over the floor, and every thing was in confusion. The prisoner was at several of the neighbouring houses during the morning, and to the usual enquiries after "Pat," gave different and contradictory answers, and during the same day he came to Pittsburgh on a mare which had belonged to the deceased. On Monday he was met by Powell in the street, who asked him where "Pat" was, to which he answered that he had gone to the New Garrison—but afterwards called to him and said that he had gone to some other place. Powell observing that the prisoner had a bundle of clothes, part of which were those of the deceased, inquired why he had brought them to town, to which the prisoner gave evasive and contradictory replies. Powell left him in order to seek the deceased at the place to which the prisoner had directed him, but not finding him and surprised at the conduct of the prisoner, the idea that he had been murdered struck him with such force, that finding that the prisoner had left the city he returned home to alarm the neighbours. He reached home late at night and having roused part of his own family and some others, went to the cabin of the deceased, where they found that his new clothes were gone except his hat which was in his trunk, and some of his old clothes. Upon searching the house they found an axe with blood upon it, and discovered also blood upon the floor. On Tuesday morning the body was discovered under the floor with no other covering than a shirt and a woollen night-dress. That part of the bed in which "Pat" had used to sleep was found to be cut open, the chaff it had contained was partly burned and part remained mingled with blood near the fire place; the pillow and the wall near it were bloody as well as the floor underneath. In short it appeared from all the circumstances that Campbell had been killed in his sleep by two blows, one with the pole, the other with the edge of the axe. The circumstances led to a suspicion and an immediate pursuit of the prisoner. It was now discovered, that he had presented, and demanded specie for notes, of one of the Pittsburgh Banks, which notes proved to be the same which had been paid to the deceased on Saturday evening; and had immediately after crossed the Monongahela river and proceeded to the tavern of Mr. Breckenridge, in Washington county, where he called himself by the name of the deceased. From this he appears to have proceeded by the most unfrequented roads to Robbstown, in Westmoreland county, where he was recognised as answering the description given of him in an advertisement offering a reward for his apprehension.

Upon his being arrested by a Mr. M'Guire, he denied his name, denied that he had ever worked on the turnpike, that he had any acquaintance with the deceased, or had heard of his death. His answers however, were so contradictory, and his statements so confused, that the persons arresting him thought themselves authorized to detain him, and he was accordingly lodged in the Greensburgh gaol. On his journey thence to Pittsburgh many enquiries were put to him respecting the deceased, and upon his insisting that he had gone to Pittsburgh, he was asked in what dress he had gone, to which he replied that he had worn his new clothes which he described, particularly his hat, which hat had previously been found in the hut. The most valuable part of the clothing of the deceased, was found in the saddlebags of the prisoner. A vest belonging to the prisoner, which it was proved he had worn on the evening previous to the murder, when last seen with the deceased, and the morning after, was found covered with blood. These circumstances together with many others which were developed in the course of the testimony, formed a chain of evidence so strong against the prisoner that the most remote doubt of his guilt could not be entertained.

The case was opened by Mr. Wilkins on the part of the Commonwealth, who remarked that the task of prosecution was a new one to him and had been assumed only at the request of the managers of the Turnpike company, in whose employ the deceased was at the time of the murder. Supposing that the regular prosecuting officer would be absent on his official duties at Harrisburgh they had requested Mr. Biddle and himself to see that public justice was duly administered.

One of the defendant's counsel, Mr. Shaler then stated the points of defence which, it was conceived arose out of the evidence of the commonwealth, and read a number of cases and treatises to shew the fallacious nature of presumptive evidence which alone had been adduced on this occasion.

In conclusion, Mr. Biddle entered at some length upon the nature and doctrine of presumptive evidence, and gave a view of the consequences that would result from the doctrine of the defendants counsel. He also went over the whole mass of the testimony, commenting minutely on its several items.

On Friday evening, his Honour, Judge Roberts, delivered the charge of the court, and the jury after a short consultation, brought in a verdict of Guilty of murder in the first degree.

On Saturday morning the following elegant & impressive address was made to the prisoner by his honour, Judge Roberts.

JOHN TIERNAN,—After a fair and impartial trial, in which you have had all the aid that counsel could afford, you have, upon the most satisfactory evidence, been convicted of the crime of wilful and deliberate murder:—A crime at which human nature shrinks with horror, and this crime, heinous as it is in its nature, has, in your case, been attended with circumstances of peculiar atrocity. The man whom you murdered was your countryman; with whom you met in a land of strangers. These were circumstances calculated to excite fraternal feelings in the bosom of each. They were cherished in the generous and manly breast of Campbell:—he became your friend & benefactor—he received you under his humble shed, and reposed, as he believed and had a right to expect, in safety by your side. But you in violation of every human tie—in violation of those bonds which even abandoned men respect, became the midnight assassin of this man. Taking advantage of the confidence reposed in you, you murdered him in his sleep! If we seek for your motives, for perpetrating a deed so shocking, we shall find them the most base and sordid. Your object was to grasp the whole of that little pittance, which a generous man daily shared with you.

God forbid! that a sentence should be uttered by us, which might savour of unnecessary harshness; but it is conceived to be of importance, that you should duly appreciate the situation in which you are placed, in order that you may employ the short period of life allotted to you, in sincere repentance and fervent prayer and supplication, to that Almighty Being in whose presence you must shortly appear, to answer for your crimes To assist you in this necessary work, we desire you to apply to some pious divine, of the religious society to which you may belong, or to such others as may be able to administer consolation to you.

It now only remains the painful duty of the court, to pronounce the awful sentence of the law—which is, that you be taken hence, to the place whence you came, and thence to the place of execution and that there you be hanged by the neck until you are dead. And may God have mercy on your soul.

NATIONAL LEGISLATURE.

Compensation Bill.—The bill, granting a compensation of eight dollars a day and eight dollars mileage, to members of congress, has been passed by the House of Representatives, and sent to the Senate for concurrence.

On the 7th inst. Mr. Mercer proposed a resolution which was adopted by the House of Representatives; to appoint a committee to enquire into the expediency of causing to be printed the journals and proceedings of Congress from the year 1783, together with the correspondence of our government with ministers and agents in foreign countries. Also of printing the journal of the general convention which framed the constitution of the United States; and that the committee should have leave to report by bill or otherwise. A printed publication says the Alexandria Gazette, of greater interest, and perhaps utility, has rarely issued from the press than this will be. It will be the manual of American politicians and statesmen.

A circumstance of rather a delicate nature transpired on the same day. Mr. Williams, of North Carolina, chairman of the committee of claims, laid before the house a letter which he had received from colonel John Anderson, offering him the sum of $500 as "part pay for extra trouble in supporting certain claims to be exhibited to Congress."

This col. John Anderson, it appears, was employed by the inhabitants of Michigan territory, who suffered losses during the late war, to urge their suits for relief at the seat of government, and endeavour to get substantiated before the committee of claims, their claims for compensation for the losses they had sustained. In this situation the colonel seems to have been impressed with an idea, that by the application of a sum of money, he might suborn the chairman of that committee to favour the claims of himself and his clients.

Upon the representation of these facts, which was read from Mr. William's statement, by the clerk at the table, a resolution was offered by Mr. Forsyth, and immediately adopted, for arresting the colonel, and bringing him to the bar of the house to answer for his contempt. He was brought forward on the 8th, informed of his offence, and told that he might employ counsel to answer interrogatories that should be put to him the next day. On the 10th, a resolution was offered, that further proceedings in the case should not be had in the house, that the offender be turned over to be dealt with by the laws, and that the house inquire into the expediency of providing by law for the punishment of similar contempts and infringements of members' priviliges.

The House adjourned without a decision. Here the matter rested at the last dates.—

It is a singular fact, that the crown of England may, as a London editor remarks, devolve eventually on the head of the son of Jerome Buonaparte. The London editor proceeds to remark, it is hoped that parliament will pass a special act to prevent so deplorable a calamity.

The reader may remember some time since an interesting account was published of the island of Pitcairn. In the year 1789, some mutineers belonging to the English ship Bounty, under the command of captain Christian, intermarried with the natives of Otaheite. From this intercourse, a race has sprung up to the number of fifty, which had never been discovered until the year 1814, when an American trader by the name of Mathew Folger, accidentally found them out. The island has been since visited by two of his Britannic majesty's ships. These simple children of nature have been taught to believe in the principles of the Christian religion by Christian, the only surviving mutineer, whom they reverence as a father, and whose word is law. Unacquainted with all the follies and forms of polished life, this little community lead an existence perfectly pastoral. The women are described as models of exquisite beauty, and the men to have all the innocence and simplicity of an Arcadian state. They say that it is against the religion which they profess for a man to be allowed two wives. They repeat scriptural passages with much apparent devotion, and always say grace before meals. How many novels and poems will be formed from this practical specimen of Arcadian manners, it is needless to conjecture. Christian expressed some desire to return to his native country, and he was immediately surrounded by his little community, who with many prayers and tears entreated him not to go. [London pap.

The injunction of secrecy having long since been removed, the editor of the National Intelligencer has published a secret act of congress, passed in January, 1811, authorizing the president to take possession of East and West Florida, under certain contingencies, viz. an attempt by any other power to occupy them, or an offer, by the local authorities, to surrender them to the United States. The reasons for the law, as assigned in the preamble and resolution accompanying it, were, the peculiar circumstances of Spain, and her colonies, and the influence which the possession of those colonies by others might have upon the security, tranquility and commerce of the U. States.

The same paper contains a secret act of 1813, authorizing the president to maintain possession of that part of West Florida, lying westward of the Perdido, and claimed by the United States as part of Louisiana.
